

MORNING APPEAL

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21

Stevens, the cyclist, has made a complete "bungle" of his expedition in search of Stanley. He confesses failure, and is making his way home. The most he did was to attach himself to a caravan of Dr. Abbott, who was sent out by the Smithsonian Institution at Washington to study the botany and make collections of the flora and the entomology of interior Africa. Stevens stuck to Dr. Brown like a leech, and never made so much as a day of exploration on his own account. He has done about as much indeed, as any one of the dusky water-carriers of Dr. Brown's expedition might have done towards discovering the whereabouts of Stanley. As a bit of newspaper enterprise, the New York World must feel that its discovery scheme has resulted humiliating. Stevens tagged on to the Brown caravan until it penetrated the M'sai country, when it turned back, having accomplished all the doctor desired, and the courageous cyclist turned back also, with his wheel safely stored on a camel's hump. Perhaps it was best, for it may be assumed that if the man had gone up into the lake region with his half dozen attendants, where Stanley has for eight years been endeavoring to gain a foothold, we should never more have heard of Stevens.

W. K. Beard, Master Carpenter of the Pennsylvania Railroad, performed his third great bridge-moving feat yesterday morning, moving the iron bridge over Mill Creek in twelve minutes. In fifty-eight minutes from the beginning of the work a freight train and two engines crossed the bridge, which is two hundred and fifty feet long and weighs twenty-five hundred tons. It was moved forty-five feet by one hundred men and seventy-eight trestles and rollers, jacks and cranes. Beard moved the iron bridge over the Conestoga near Lancaster, August 7, 1887, in fifteen minutes.

The informal trials of the Charles-town are said to have shown that the defects which existed on the former trial have been overcome and that she is practically ready for the official test. Every one will wish the cruiser and her builders success on her next trial.

What on Earth

Is the reason people will not, cannot, or do not see any difference in cheap nos trims put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits, rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at equal price? No medicine in the world is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BEGG'S BLOOD PURIFIER & BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle that does not do its work, will cost you nothing. W. H. Chedie, Druggist.
